Rose Seima-Malatji

About

I am a speaker and communication coach who equips leaders, young people and creatives with the confidence and language to communicate clearly, lead courageously and show up fully in the spaces they occupy.
I help individuals and organisations move from self doubt to self leadership, strengthening how they speak, lead and engage with others.

Credibility Overview

I began my speaking journey at the age of 16 as a TEDx speaker and have since worked across corporate, faith-based, and creative platforms locally and internationally. My work includes coaching Toastmasters speakers, supporting individuals in executive leadership roles and speaking at high-profile fundraising events, including engagements for the former British High Commissioner in 2014.

I bring together lived experience, structured communication tools and reflective leadership practices to create conversations that shift confidence, clarity and responsibility.

What makes Rose  different

I do not believe in performance driven motivation. My work is intentional and deeply rooted in identity, confidence and communication. I focus on what is happening beneath the surface, because that is where lasting change begins. I challenge people to take ownership of their voice, their presence and their responsibility. When they leave the room, they do not just feel inspired. They leave equipped, aware and ready to apply what they have learned long after the event is over.
